

Call for Papers

Deadline: 3 May 2024

Future for Religious Heritage (FRH) is happy to launch the Call for Papers to participate in the FRH Conference 2024 “Religious Heritage in Transition: Challenges and Solutions” which will take place in Krakow, Poland from 22-24 September. The Call for Papers will close on 3 May 2024 at 12:00 CET.

The 20 selected papers will be invited to produce a poster that will be exhibited at the conference. The best 4 papers out of these 20 will also be invited to give a 5-minute presentation.

Themes and subthemes

Amidst the swift currents of change, religious heritage stands as a beacon of resilience, echoing the stories of our past and charting the course for our collective future.

This year, the FRH conference delves deeper into the concept of transition, probing the depths of challenges faced by religious heritage and seeking solutions for its enduring significance. How can we ensure that our heritage remains not only intact but thrives as a vital resource for all citizens in the sustainable tapestry of tomorrow?

We invite scholars, practitioners, and visionaries to contribute their insights and expertise. From the meticulous craft of architectural conservation to the transformative power of community engagement, every perspective enriches our collective understanding and empowers us to chart a course toward a more sustainable future.

FRH welcomes submissions addressing one or more topics relevant to these 4 thematic clusters:

- Resilient Heritage: climate change, demographic changes/migration, abandoned heritage, natural disasters, renewable energy, insulation, resilience
- Sustainable Solutions: adaptive reuse, heritage crafts skills, maintenance/restoration challenges, best and worst cases, education, training for professionals
- Digital Futures: new technologies in tourism, online promotion of pilgrimage routes, 3D mapping, virtual reality,
- Quality of Life: the role of religious heritage in the health and well-being of citizens, spiritual meaning of religious heritage, religious heritage contribution to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)
